

What Am I? Two Truths and A Lie

1. I am a hollow organ.
2. I can get as large as a smart car during pregnancy.
3. My lining sheds each month, unless pregnancy occurs.

1. The lungs are part of me.
2. I breathe air and distribute oxygen to your body.
3. I can keep you alive for at least 90 minutes without air.

1. I can eat bark & leaves and turn it into food for humans.
2. I eliminate the waste your body cannot use.
3. I break down your food into fuel.

1. I pump blood to all the parts of your body.
2. I pump small amounts of helium into your body.
3. This system contains about 5 liters of blood.

1. I help bring new life into the world.
2. Ovulation is how I make female reproductive hormones.
3. Ovulation is only a sign of health if you are a Mom.

1. I can repair myself.
2. You can't sit or stand without me.
3. It is impossible to break me.

1. We are a pair of organs in the reproductive system.
2. Each one is about the size of an almond.
3. Our job is to release sugar into the blood.

1. I am the reason for all the growing and changing you do in puberty.
2. I'm basically like a film director; I tell every body system what to do.
3. The only organ I don't communicate with is the brain.

1. I am named after a famous Italian trumpet player.
2. I am about the width of a single piece of spaghetti.
3. In ovulation, the egg leaves the ovary and travels to one of us.